APPEALS

17. In accordance with Section 66 of the Act, any challenge to this order must be made to the High Court by any interested person within 6 weeks of it being made.

An interested person is someone who lives in, regularly works in, or visits the restricted area. This means that only those who are directly affected by the restrictions have the power to challenge. The right to challenge also exists where an order is varied by the council. Interested persons can challenge the validity of this order on two grounds: That the council did not have the power to make the order, or to include particular prohibitions or requirements; or that one of the requirements of the legislation, for instance, consultation has not been complied with. When an application is made, the High Court can decide to suspend the operation of the order pending the court's decision, in part or in whole. The High Court has the ability to uphold the order, quash it, or vary it.
